Rias Baixas in Galicia, Spain. Antonio combines traditional, modern and local influences in his winemaking, handcrafting trully unique wines.

DESCONCIERTO

Desconcierto Albariño wine has been made exclusively from grapes of the Albariño variety and is produced in the town of Cambados. Our vineyards are situated at an altitude of 10 metres above sea level and the soil is basically composed of fine granite particles and sand. The spacing is 5 x 4 on a trellis system with a density of approximately 600 vines per hectare with an average age of not less than 25 years. The abundant rainfall typical of the Galician climate, the town's exposure to the sea and the geographical location of our vineyards, which are very close to the shores of the Arousa Estuary, give this wine a disconcerting, strong Atlantic character.

Winemaking

The grapes are harvested by hand, in 18-kilo crates, towards the end of September. The grapes that are used to make DESCONCIERTO are selected in the vineyard. In the winery they undergo a long pressing, on average 4 hours, with graduated low intensity pressings and carefully-controlled yields. Once the must has been separated from the thicker sediment, fermentation commences spontaneously, and the temperature is controlled round the clock. Two weeks after fermentation has finished the wine is separated from the lees, and transferred preserving the fine lees, which will be in solution in the wine using the technique of pump-over every 15 days, over 7 months.
