D.O. Q Priorat: A small and dynamic wine region in Catalonia, in NE Spain known for full-bodied red wines made mostly from Gernache and Cariñena, although international varietals can be used. It has a Continental climate with long, hot, and dry Summers. The region's slate soil, known as "llicorella" in Catalan is of paramount importance to winemakers as it imparts much of the minerality wines this area is prized for. The combination of the poor soil and dry weather creates abnormally low yields. Winemaking in this region dates to the 12th century when monks of the Carthusian Order established the Priorato dei Scala Dei monastery and planted vineyards there.
